

RECRUITING HEALTH PROFESSIONAL GUEST SPEAKERS

To inspire, motivate and share your knowledge!

*You know how to get to health professional school and the importance of serving the underserved.
Please share your wisdom with others!*

The UCSF Fresno Latino Center for Medical Education and Research (LaCMER) has a medical and health education pipeline program that supports disadvantaged and underrepresented students in middle school through college who are interested in pursuing careers in health or medicine. One of our objectives is to facilitate opportunities for our students to hear from health professionals as featured guest speakers at the respective school sites.

Health professional guest speakers share their stories such as their life experiences, educational journey, pathway to a professional career, challenges, successes, tools of their trade (examples welcome), and explore issues such as health disparities and cultural competency. Guest speakers are typically slotted for one hour, depending on the school site and scheduled activity. Below are opportunities for individuals who are interested and available.

Feel free to provide general availability and we will work with you to identify classes that may work within your schedule. Thank you for your consideration!
